

Kimiya Factory (she/her) graduated from the University of Texas at San Antonio with a bachelor of arts in political science and a minor in legal studies. While leading/co-founding the movement #ChangeRapeCulture, Factory challenges Title IX policies regarding structural violence and sexual misconduct at institutions in San Antonio.

Factory is the president/executive director of Black Freedom Factory, an organization that encourages data driven activism, diversity by redefining professionalism, diversity and equity regarding race relations. Factory is actively working alongside advocates in the city to achieve accountability in the interest of grassroots efforts for vulnerable populations. Factory identifies as a Queer Indigenous Afro-Latina.

