Crisiel Barajas

Medical Assisting

“Where God guides, He provides. No matter how things look, God is still in control. Stay in peace and be hopeful. Your blessing is coming soon.”

-Gennany Kent

Crisiel M. Moreira G. was born on February 1, 1996 in Panama City, Panama. She grew up in a town called Veracruz and moved to the United States in November 2014. She came to the country without knowledge of the language. In four years, she learned the language and graduated with two associates, one in pre-nursing and another in medical assisting.

Her determination and faith has helped her accomplish many of her academic goals. The education she received has prepared her with the knowledge required to manage and help those with medical needs. Crisiel believes that choosing a medical career is the best way to show love for her neighbors. She wants to continue her education and become a nurse practitioner to give a better quality of care to her patients.

Through her college studies, Crisiel has realized that being an international student is not easy. It requires more effort and time. She hopes her accomplishments can encourage others in a similar position.
