WORK SCHEDULE

Work Hours

A maximum of nineteen (19) work hours per week are allowed based on the student's financial need as demonstrated by the Student Aid Report.

The work schedule is determined between the supervisor and the work-study student. The immediate supervisor is encouraged to initiate the work-schedule discussion on or before the first day of work by asking the student about their class schedule, upcoming events and other related educational obligations that may arise during the semester.

Students are not permitted to work during established, assigned, or scheduled class times or events. If work is done during such periods, written justification from the student, supervisor and class professor will be required and must be submitted for approval to the Student Financial Aid advisor at the campus.

Requests for leave should be made to the supervisor or designated staff in advance, if at all possible, or the department policy and procedure governing such action must be followed.

Beginning and Ending Dates

Work-Study students may begin work on the first day of classes of the semester, if eligibility is met. The final day to work each semester is the last day of the academic semester. Only students with a secured enrollment for the subsequent semester may be considered for employment for the following semester.

Meal and Comfort Breaks

Work-study students are eligible for a fifteen (15) minute break and a thirty (30) minute unpaid lunch break for every four (4) hours worked. An hour unpaid lunch break is encouraged for students who work eight (8) hours or more in one day. Supervisors are to clarify meal and break times that meet the needs of both the agency and the students. Students may not work more than ten (10) hours in one day shift.

Pay Rate

The hourly rate for all work-study jobs is $14.37 per hour. Starting September 1, 2023 the pay rate will increase to $15.33 per hour as approved by the Alamo Colleges Board.

Enrollment

All students must maintain enrollment in at least six (6) credit hours. These enrollment hours must all be listed within your Degree Plan (CPOS).

EXPECTATIONS OF WORK-STUDY STUDENTS

Work-study students working on campus or with a District support office are expected to maintain a high level of professionalism. Your supervisor should establish and set forth all expectations for their work study students. This is to include work attire, performance, call-out process ETC... Below are general expectations regarding workplace etiquette and behaviors that most employers expect new hires to exhibit.

Acceptable behavior

As an employee of an on-campus department of support office, students, staff and visitors will view a work-study student as a professional who represents the department. Self-monitoring of behavior is critical. Behavior that is acceptable in other settings, such as those in a social setting are not always appropriate and may not be suitable in the workplace.

Appropriate Dress for Your Work Setting

Inquire about dress and grooming (including hairstyle) expectations when initially meeting with your supervisor to discuss your work schedule. Remain mindful that work-study students represent the department.

Attendance

The departments and the students served depend on a regular schedule, making regular attendance at work a priority. Punctuality, arriving at work and returning from scheduled breaks are critical for the operation of the department. Any deviation from the regularly scheduled hours must be discussed prior to the change of hours with the supervisor. Explaining an absence or reason for tardiness after the event is not acceptable professional behavior.

The supervisor recognizes that work-study students at times might need to deviate from their work schedule to get extra studying completed or to finish a class project. These requests must be discussed with the supervisor with sufficient notice, at least a week or several days beforehand.

If you are going to be absent due to illness or emergency, you must speak with your supervisor or designee at least a half hour before the start of the scheduled work time.

Confidentiality

Work-study students should avoid prying to discover information not needed to complete a work-related task. Respect student's and co-workers' privacy by not reading faxes, email, computer screens, or mail that is not shared. As a member of a department, refrain from discussing student's, individuals, cases or sensitive information outside of the department. Additionally, department documents, files, and other written materials should not be taken from the premises.

Work-study students should refrain from posting photographs of students or of themselves at work with other students or photographs of co-workers on social media.

Language

In the workplace, students need to be thoughtful of language as they interact with co-workers, visitors and students. Profanity is not appropriate regardless of the situation. Writing and speaking in complete sentences prevents miscommunication. Always address co-workers, visitors and students by their last name, unless invited to refer to them by their first name.

Personal Business

Take care of personal business, such as making or taking personal phone calls, texting messages, or sending emails before arriving at work or during your breaks, away from co-workers, guests or students.

Professional Relationships

As a Work-Study student, one of the student's objectives is to meet and get to know professionals who may later offer a job, refer the student to another place of employment or who may agree to serve to as a reference. Every effort should be made to impress the professionals with whom the student makes contact. Work to build and maintain a healthy working relationship with individuals at work.

Supervision

Work-study students are required to always have supervision and should always know how to reach out to their supervisor in the event guidance or information is needed. A work-study should not be left physically unattended or "in charge" of the department.

If you as a work study are ever left unsupervised or asked to par-take in full-time employee duties please contact the work study financial aid advisor at your home campus immediately.

Tardiness

Students are expected to arrive on time to their work-study assignment. If running late to work, call to notify the supervisor at least a half-hour before the scheduled start time, or as soon as possible.

Office Updates

Work study work and assignments for the Fall 2022 and Spring 2023 semesters will be transiting back to in-person, remote and hybrid work. Supervisors must ensure students have all access and technology equipment needed to complete their assignments. Supervisors will establish a method to ensure students are supervised and work is accounted for while students are working remotely.

Work Study Students who will be working in person or hybrid are not allowed to preform or be used in a full time/part time Alamo Colleges or vendor employer. This is not limited to

- Working in the office by themselves unsupervised
- Used to clean and sanitize offices, tables, phones, walls etc other than the student's assigned work space.
- Used in a janitorial role
- Used to set up or take down event equipment

Work-study students must complete an electronic timesheet on a daily bases to avoid misreporting of actual hours worked. The completed WTE timesheet must be submitted within two (2) business days of the end of a pay period. The department supervisor will review for accuracy and approve the student's WTE submission before the deadline of each pay period.
