Dear Adena:

Please pardon the delay in responding to your letter of December 12, 2008, providing additional information regarding courses offered at Northeast Lakeview College.

- Courses taught at Northeast Lakeview are St. Philip's College courses and are taught by St. Philip's College faculty. All teaching credentials are certified by St. Philip's, and oversight of the faculty and curriculum of St. Philip's courses is provided by the Vice President for Academic Affairs of St. Philip's.
- Northeast Lakeview College students are not comingled with those from St. Philip's.
- Effective Spring, 2009, San Antonio College students will not be comingled with those of St. Philip's College.
- All measures of SPC students' learning are the same at both campuses.

I am now comfortable knowing that Northeast Lakeview College is a stand-alone campus where other colleges within the Alamo Community College District are offering their own courses which are being taught and supervised by the colleges offering the courses. It is my understanding that the reasons for other colleges offering courses at the Northeast Lakeview College include the rising cost of gasoline, the fact that several programs are only offered at one institution within the District, and that there is not yet a full complement of faculty or programs at Northeast Lakeview College.

Best regards,
